

Decapitating D.C.

by Jeremy James

In several of our previous papers we discussed the Illuminati plan for the United States. This once great nation is set to be painfully transformed – one of their favorite expressions.

The creation of a New World Order requires the subjugation of the economic, military and political powerhouse that has played such a prominent role in promoting and defending the old world order. The planned Marxist super-state can only come into being when the U.S. as we know it has been reduced to a minor role on the world stage.

According to their perverse philosophy, order can emerge out of chaos, like a phoenix from the flames – another image much favored by the Elite. The more lethal the blow they inflict, the more fruitful the renewal they believe will follow.

This will be Satan's version of the Flood, where the whole world is submerged in turmoil and brought back to 'life' again by the so-called Illuminated ones. These are the 'wise men', the Ruling Elite, who control events from behind the scenes. As clever as they imagine themselves to be, they are nothing more than gormless puppets of Satan, mewling catspaws in the hands of the great Deceiver.

Connecting the Crisis with the office of the U.S. President

These 'Illuminated Ones' are engineering world events to produce a crisis of epic proportions. In our last paper on this subject [The Unfolding Constitutional Crisis in the U.S., #173, October 6 2018] we referred to the way they are connecting this international crisis with the office of U.S. President. We repeat again what we said in that paper and its predecessor [#141, 2017]:

The Elite needed a figure from outside the establishment in the office of President so that, when the economic collapse finally happens, they will have a suitable fall-guy to take the blame. This is where Trump comes in. He is neither Democratic nor Republican (in any real sense). He is not identified with Wall Street, the military-industrial complex, or any obvious corporate interests. Portrayed all along as a maverick and an interloper, both by his own people and by the media, he is the ideal figure on which to hang full responsibility for the coming disaster, both economic and military.

Some pundits try to present him as an enemy of the "deep state" – the ultra-rich Elite who control America. They even claim he is standing in their way and delaying implementation of the New World Order. But this is ridiculous. Trump is a fully-paid up member of this subversive elite, moulded and trained over several decades for the position he now holds (just like his N Korean counterpart).

In our earlier papers (#97 and #109), in which we discussed the possibility of a Constitutional crisis involving the office of the President, we suggested that nationwide concern surrounding this office and its incumbent would play a key role in these events. Although it has arrived by a different course, the Constitutional crisis that we predicted is now a reality. The American people are faced with an incumbent in the office of President whom they now realize is well capable of dangerously irrational acts and who cannot be constrained in a prompt and timely manner by Congress. The only effective short-term option is forcible removal – a military coup.

For the time being, impeachment has become the proxy for a military coup.

Impeachment

We have seen how the strenuous attempts by the Democratic Party to impeach President Trump and remove him from office have increased their momentum. A sizeable proportion of the American electorate is now convinced that the President is unfit for office. Their attempts at impeachment are part of the Illuminati plan to polarize the American people and raise in their minds the possibility that their supreme leader may indeed be unstable. Even his most ardent supporters must now be wondering where his capricious decisions will lead them next.

They got a bitter taste of this when he ordered the assassination of the Iranian general, Qassem Suleimani. By any accepted measure – in the field of international relations – this was a declaration of war. The Iranians certainly see it that way, but the Western media have downplayed the dark significance of what Trump has just done. Without consulting Congress and without any evident change in the balance of power between the two nations, the President unilaterally challenged a dangerous military adversary to embark on a protracted war that could result in enormous casualties on both sides.

All of this fits perfectly with the Illuminati plan. They need someone to blame when the world financial system collapses. They also need someone at the helm who is highly irrational, someone whom the public will believe has blundered tragically and will blunder again. Trump is their man, picked for this purpose.

The assassination of Suleimani is part of their plan to draw the U.S. into a war which it cannot win. Did they win in Afghanistan? Did they win in Iraq? Did they win in Syria? The fact that they are militarily superior to Iran – by an order of magnitude – is irrelevant. The moment Iran seems likely to fold, both Russia and Turkey will come to their aid. These nations have already made territorial incursions that will assist them greatly in the coming war – Russia summarily annexed Crimea in 2014 and Turkey recently sent ground troops into Libya.

Iran has many retaliatory options

While the world waits to see how Iran will respond to the killing of Suleimani, who was a highly respected figure in Iran, we would do well to reflect on the huge number of options open to them. They include the shelling of the Straits of Hormuz, effectively cutting off access to oil in the region and causing a massive increase in the price of oil. This will cause runaway inflation in the West and inflict serious damage on industrial production.

Or they could target all American citizens in the Middle East, bombing embassies and kidnapping senior businessmen and diplomats. Or they could activate sleeper cells in the U.S. which could be used to sabotage public utilities and even take down the power grid – See our paper #90. As we pointed out in that paper, the U.S. does not make any of its own largescale electrical transformers and has only a small number in reserve. The construction, delivery and installation of a new unit can take up to two years.

Or they could conduct a series of cyber attacks on banks and public utilities across the U.S. A successful hit on the New York Stock Exchange, for example, would cause pandemonium in the markets, while the diversion of fund transfers between financial institutions could cause the international banking system to seize up.

SNAP

They could also decide to bypass the commercial sector entirely and attack the SNAP system instead [Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, formerly known as the Food Stamp program], which would not have anything like the same resilience or ‘layers of protection’ that military and financial systems are known to have. Americans don’t seem to appreciate how critical this system is to the security and stability of their nation. More than 40 million people depend on their regular SNAP payment, which is credited electronically to a debit card. Most of them live in large cities so, if they suddenly find themselves without food, they will break into stores and take it. This would lead to widespread looting, violence and immense social unrest. Extremists would take the opportunity to set fire to buildings and turn large parts of many cities into no-go areas.

“SNAP benefits supplied roughly 40 million Americans in 2018, at an expenditure of $57.1 billion. Approximately 9.2% of American households obtained SNAP benefits at some point during 2017, with approximately 16.7% of all children living in households with SNAP benefits.” - Wikipedia

We have warned of these options in previous papers, as well as another option which, if the enemies of the U.S. decide to use it, could have a traumatic impact on the country as a whole. The Iranians may already have prepared for this, an event whose impact would be mainly psychological but which all Americans, and the world at large, would see as a traumatic, “nothing will ever be the same again” moment.

The Capitol Hill Option

The Elite achieved a great deal by creating such a moment on 9/11. It gave them an excuse to embark on a series of wars which devastated several countries in the Middle East and North Africa. The visual impact of the attacks, repeated over and over again on television, wore down any public resistance to what the hawks were proposing. The Elite would welcome an equally telegenic catastrophe as a prelude to their next major war, a scene they can use again and again to lure the American people even further down a path of no return.

In our paper, Strange Signs, John the Baptist, and the New World Order [#73, 2015] we showed how the destruction of another iconic building, the great bastion of democracy on Capitol Hill, would meet this objective. No building is as closely identified in the national consciousness with the independence and might, honor and invincibility of the United States. To the average American it has stood forever. Something would certainly ‘snap’ in the hearts of most patriots if it were demolished in a cataclysmic terrorist attack.

In that paper we discussed a possible mode of delivery, namely the famous Malaysia Airlines Flight 370 which went missing on March 8, 2014. The Boeing 777 was travelling from Kuala Lumpur to Beijing with 227 passengers on board and 12 crew members when it disappeared from the radar. Despite an exhaustive search, in which only a few pieces of debris were discovered, there are still many questions yet to be answered about this ill-fated flight. Many doubt whether the debris came from the plane. Some of it was found a year later on the island of Réunion, which lies about 500 miles east of Madagascar. In order to arrive there, the piece in question – a sturdy wing flaperon – had to traverse over 2200 miles of ocean (per Wikipedia), consistently moving in a westerly direction (how?) at a rate of 5 miles a day. This doesn’t make any sense. (Given that the earth is flat, the distance is actually much greater, closer to 4000 miles.)

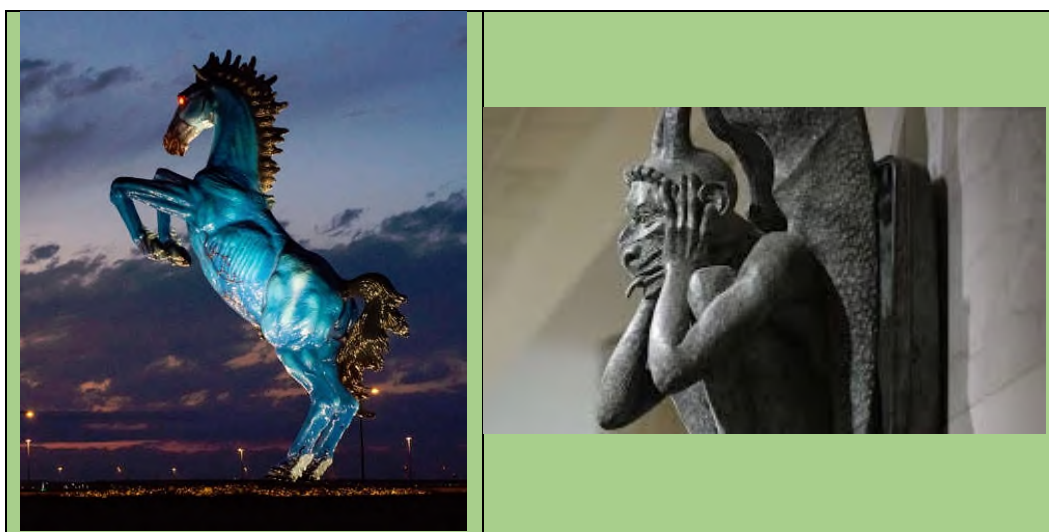

If the Illuminati go ahead with their plan, the before-and-after shots would look like this. The Washington Monument – a shrine to Baal – would then be visible from East Capitol Street.

The flight may have been hijacked and diverted by agents of Iran for use later in American airspace. A carrier of this size could deliver more than enough high explosives to demolish Capitol Hill. For a country which for many years has lived under the shadow of an American invasion, a retaliatory strike of this magnitude, with the implied threat of more to follow, would be a formidable strategic asset for Iran in a conflict with the U.S.

Seat of Government

If Capitol Hill were attacked in this way, the U.S. government would need to relocate. It has long been rumored that Denver, Colorado has been chosen for this purpose. Many sources have reported the existence of a large multi-tiered underground facility close to the airport, while the airport itself has several lurid murals and art installations which reek of Illuminati arrogance [See examples below]:

‘Cultural’ sites

A clear sign that President Trump is prepared to take action which will have severe and irreversible consequences for the U.S. was given by his tweet on 4 January where he told the American people that he had prepared a ‘target list’ of 52 Iranian sites, some of which were cultural. For ‘cultural’ read religious, namely sites revered by Shia Muslims.

The average American may not appreciate just how insane this is!

When he was questioned about this the following day, President Trump justified his decision as follows:

“They’re allowed to kill our people. They’re allowed to torture and maim our people. They’re allowed to use roadside bombs and blow up our people. And we’re not allowed to touch their cultural sites? It doesn’t work that way.”

Let's consider some possible 'targets' on his hit list:

This is the Imam Hussayn Shrine in Karbala, Iraq. Hussayn, who was murdered in 680 A.D., is revered as a Shi'ite martyr. Around 45 million Muslims make a pilgrimage to Karbala every year to visit this site. That is an astronomical number of pilgrims, indicative of the immense religious significance of this site in the minds and hearts of Shi'ite Muslims. Is this on his list?

What about the Imam Ali Mosque in Najaf, Iraq? -

The initial structure over this tomb was built in 786 A.D. It has been substantially embellished by several Caliphs over the centuries and is revered by Shi'ites across the Middle East, attracting millions of pilgrims every year.

Is this on the President's list?

There are several other shrines and pilgrimage sites across Iran and Iraq which are highly revered by members of the Shi'ite branch of Islam. It would be an appalling act of sacrilege in their eyes to desecrate any of them. In doing so the President would invite a backlash which would not abate until Shi'ite honor had been avenged. No matter how long it would take, or how many lives would have to be sacrificed, they would vent their outrage in endless military sorties until the enemy had been utterly destroyed. Damaging any of these shrines is equivalent to cracking open a hornets' nest.

CONCLUSION

We don't know how far the Elite are prepared to go to provoke a major war in the Middle East, a devastating confrontation between Islam and the West, but the recent actions by President Trump would suggest that they will do whatever it takes.

In his prize-winning fictional account of the fall of the United States – Origins of the American Military Coup of 2012 – Lieutenant Colonel Charles J. Dunlap, Jr., USAF, made a number of very insightful statements. [A copy of his essay was appended to our paper #141.] His essay was written in 1992 and the award was conferred by General Colin Powell. In it he describes the events leading up to a military coup by an army general named Thomas Brutus. Dunlap said the public actually welcomed the coup since it ensured the maintenance of law and order and the smooth continuance of day-to-day business.

Major General Charles J Dunlap Jr, USAF

The coup was deemed necessary when the incumbent President died in office and his Vice President, for reasons unknown, refused to take his place. Rather than allow a 'power vacuum' to develop, General Brutus took control, all the while reassuring the public and the world at large that his intervention was only temporary. He then sought full legal confirmation of what he was doing by putting the question to the American people. Here is how Dunlap describes the result of the Referendum:

“Concern about crime was a major reason why General Brutus's actions were approved in the Referendum. Although voter participation by the general public was low, older Americans voted at a much higher rate. Furthermore, with the aging of the baby boom generation, the block of American voters over 45 grew to almost 53 percent of the voters by 2010. This wealthy, older electorate welcomed an organization which could ensure their physical security. When it counted, they backed Brutus in the Referendum – probably the last votes they'll ever cast.”

We could speculate as to how this fictional scenario might anticipate parts of the plan which the Elite are now pursuing, but this should hardly be necessary. While we will never get a one-to-one match between a revolutionary blueprint and events on the ground, we can see how eerily close Dunlap got to the crisis now facing America.

Hide me from the secret counsel of the wicked;
from the insurrection of the workers of iniquity:
Who whet their tongue like a sword,
and bend their bows to shoot their arrows,
even bitter words:
That they may shoot in secret at the perfect:
suddenly do they shoot at him, and fear not.
They encourage themselves in an evil matter:
they commune of laying snares privily;
they say, Who shall see them?
