

Evidence that the Covid Vaccines Implant Bluetooth Biosensors

by Jeremy James

For reasons that are difficult to explain, a great many people are unable to believe the evidence of their own senses, yet they will readily place credence in anything they are told by their government or have seen on television.

There have been many videos on the Internet which show that the Covid vaccines contain several ingredients which are not listed by the manufacturers and which cannot possibly contribute to human health. Even those who are repelled by any hint of a 'conspiracy' should be able to see that these genetic serums are not normal in any accepted medical sense. These sceptics could also consider the mass of data – not to mention the disturbing videos – which show that the so-called vaccines are causing serious harm to many and must surely contain ingredients which conflict in some fundamental way with human biology. If serious side effects are observed in the short term in a limited number of cases, it is not unreasonable to speculate that the same deleterious ingredients could end up harming a much wider population in the longer term.

We are dealing here with common sense, nothing else. These commonsense concerns are greatly amplified by the knowledge that the so-called vaccines are still on trial and, incredibly, were never tested on animals.

How is it possible to give something like this to a child? How can any medical professional countenance such a patently irresponsible act?

Since we are dealing with a huge wall of scepticism and a flagrant refusal to see the obvious, any additional evidence that might expose what is really happening would be welcome.

The universal use of the Bluetooth addressing system

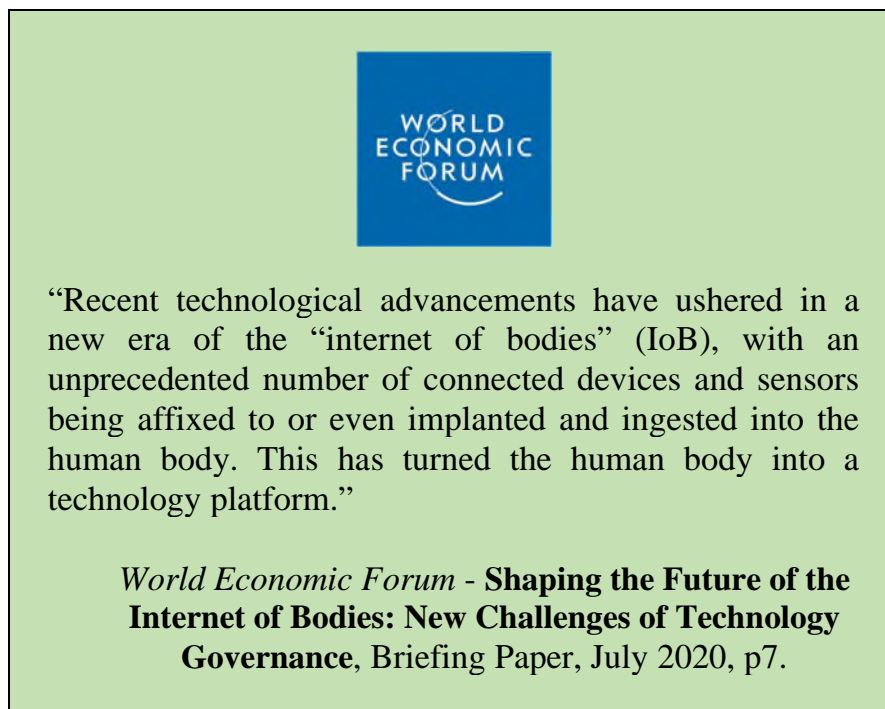

We believe the Bluetooth factor may help some people come to their senses. It offers additional evidence – in the form of letters and numbers – that the so-called vaccines contain clandestine ingredients and that these ingredients, which are being dispersed via an intensely coercive international inoculation program, are tied to a much wider agenda and have nothing at all to do with health.

Bluetooth is the name given to a band of electromagnetic frequencies which, in coded form, are used to label every cyber-connectable device with a unique identifier. The 48 byte address can uniquely identify millions, if not billions of devices. In conjunction with WiFi, it forms a backbone to the ‘Internet of things.’ However, as the World Economic Forum revealed in June, 2020, the ‘Internet of things’ is really a stepping stone to what they are now calling The Internet of Bodies. Here is how the WEF put it:

“We’re entering the era of the Internet of Bodies: collecting our physical data via a range of devices that can be implanted, swallowed or worn.”

[<https://www.weforum.org/agenda/2020/06/internet-of-bodies-covid19-recovery-governance-health-data/>]

The word to note is “implanted.” Since 8 billion people are unlikely to step forward and ask to be “implanted” with a tracking device, the Elite intend to implant it by covert means. The strongest candidate for this is a nanosize biosensor injected via the so-called Covid vaccines.

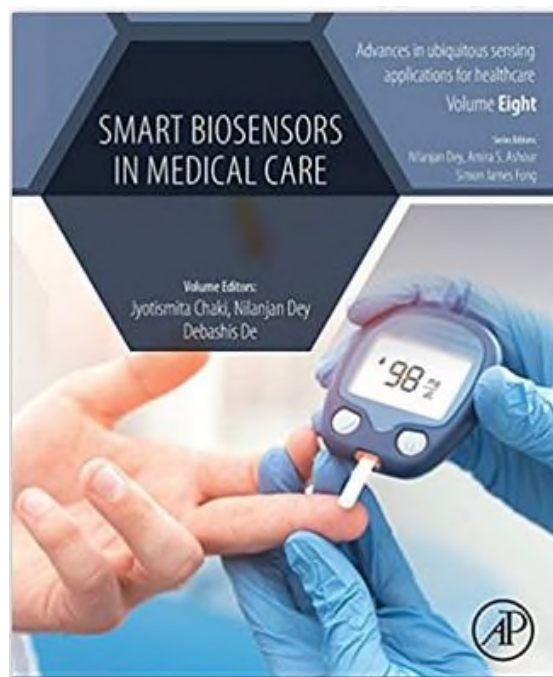

If they are now talking about the Internet of Bodies, it is because they are more than half way there already. If challenged they will argue that it is only intended to collect health data and protect the general population. In reality it will be used to track anyone implanted with a nanosensor, compile a complete record of their movements and, via additional analysis, determine the persons they associate with.

How the Bluetooth system works

A Bluetooth device, such as a smartphone, emits (on request) a signal which other Bluetooth devices in the vicinity can detect. When they detect the signal they emit a signal of their own, giving their Bluetooth address. The smartphone receives this and registers the address on the smartphone screen. As yet smartphone users are unable to do much with this information since they cannot connect with and operate most of these other devices.

When news of Bluetooth tracking of humans (and not just “things”) began to circulate on the Internet earlier this year, it was speculated that the Covid vaccines were being used to implant nanosensors in recipients without their knowledge. An enterprising individual in Russia posted a video on YouTube which showed how he was able to access via the ‘dark web’ a real-time database containing the personal records of hundreds of thousands of Russian citizens. The records included their vaccination status, current location, date of birth, and much else besides. Since virtually every record contained a positive entry for ‘vaccination status’ he concluded that the vaccines had been used to implant the biosensors.

Published in 2020.

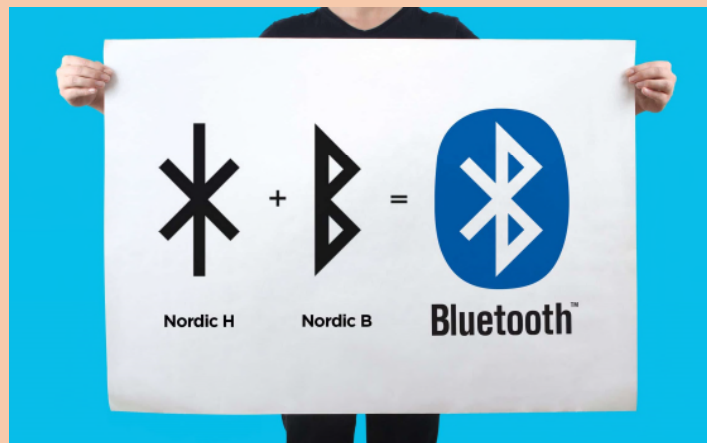

This book shows how implantable smart biosensors are being used for “ubiquitous sensing” – a term which includes universal tracking.

A number of videos have been posted on the Internet showing a long list of Bluetooth addresses detected by a smartphone. The total in each case greatly exceeded the number of people in the vicinity, leading those who uploaded the videos to conclude that the addresses were emitted, not just by smartphones in the vicinity, but by the owners of the smartphones.

The symbol for Bluetooth in the cyber world is:

This consists of the intersection of two Nordic runes, as shown below:

The lefthand rune means “destruction and chaos”, while the one on the right means “birth”. The Bluetooth symbol can therefore be taken to mean the birth of something new out of chaos or, as the Freemasons like to put it “Ordo Ab Chao” – Order Out of Chaos. This is the motto of the 33rd Degree in the Scottish rite:

Our research

Seemingly the facility to detect the full alpha-numeric (hexadecimal) Bluetooth address is not available on current models of smartphone. Since one YouTube user employed a Sony Xperia to collect data – released in 2014 using Android 4.4.4 – we purchased a secondhand specimen on the Internet. This model comes pre-loaded with a Bluetooth address detector, showing the full address in most instances. From trials conducted on our local beach, we found that it could detect devices at a maximum distance of 550 feet.

“In 2017, the U.S. Federal Drug Administration* approved the first use of digital pills in the United States. Digital pills contain tiny, ingestible sensors, as well as medicine. Once swallowed, the sensor is activated in the patient’s stomach and transmits data to their smartphone or other devices.”

Presumably they mean the Food & Drug Administration*

- World Economic Forum, 2020, The Internet of Bodies

The advantage with collecting Bluetooth data on a beach is that line-of-sight enables all potential devices to be visually identified. If we get a reading, we know where it’s coming from. Using signal shields, purchased over the Internet, we were able to eliminate the risk that signals emanating from peripheral devices were being detected by our Xperia. The beach we selected had a railway embankment running along its length, thus shielding any signals that might otherwise come from devices inland.

If two people are walking together on the beach, then we should detect, from their direction, at most two Bluetooth addresses (emitted by their smartphones). If one of them is wearing a Bluetooth earpiece, the Xperia will detect that also but will usually indicate what it is, e.g. huawei buds.

We give below the results we collected on 20th December on our local beach – see photos in Appendix A. All three offer strong support for the hypothesis that many humans are emitting Bluetooth signals, that they possess unique digital identifiers, and that the signals are emanating from the nanograde biosensors implanted without their knowledge via the Covid vaccine. (The adult uptake of the so-called vaccine in Ireland is reported to be around 93 percent, so there was a high probability that we’d find human emitters if they existed.)

In each of the three cases we took the precaution of using the two shielding pads to block ambient signals. In addition, we took measurements only when a visual inspection confirmed that there were no other Bluetooth devices (such as laptops) in the general area.

Case Number 1

A man alone on the beach, speaking into his iPhone (which registered as 'iPhone' on my smartphone Bluetooth table). I was near enough to hear him and to know that he was not using an ear piece. The other Bluetooth address was

EC:D9:74:A0:A7:47

This additional Bluetooth address may have been emitted by a biosensor in the man's body. There was no other discernible source in the vicinity.

Case Number 2

A man and a woman walking a dog. My smartphone picked up five separate Bluetooth addresses:

4C:75:6A:3D:C6:5D

41:7D:97:37:D6:C9

78:CC:05:B0:1D:B0

FE:7C:4F:8E:DA:7A

2C:7F:48:D3:FB:7E

Assuming they each had a cell phone (with a corresponding Bluetooth address) we still have to account for three other addresses. Two may have come from biosensors in their own bodies, while the third was possibly emitted by a Bluetooth tracker in the dog's collar.

Case Number 3

A man and a woman walking along the promenade beside the beach. We detected an iPhone signal along with three hexadecimal addresses:

58:70:14:B5:5D:15

2C:8A:58:68:B5:E2

30:42:EB:DC:DC:DA

Two of these addresses may have been emitted by a biosensor implanted in each person, while one of the subjects may have been carrying a cell phone other than an iPhone.

Case Number 4

A woman walking along the shore emitting two Bluetooth signals, one from her iPhone and one from another source:

03:6C:AD:2C:EB:90

It is possible to explain all of these readings on the basis given above. This necessitates an acceptance that the people involved were all implanted with Bluetooth biosensors. If they weren't then it's impossible to account for all of the signals (unless, of course, the individuals concerned were all carrying two cell phones, which is highly unlikely).

We took additional readings of other people walking on the beach – five groups in all – which gave Bluetooth addresses consistent with cell phone signals alone. One couple gave no signal, which indicated that neither of them carried a cell phone or had taken the Covid injection.

Ideally, we would have preferred to ask the individuals concerned whether or not they had received the injection, but this was not possible. Hopefully others who conduct research of this kind will be able to include vaccination status, for example by inviting friends or interesting parties to participate.

“Recent technological advancements have ushered in a new era of the “internet of bodies” (IoB), with an unprecedented number of connected devices and sensors being affixed to or even implanted and ingested into the human body.

“The IoB generates tremendous amounts of biometric and human behavioral data. This is, in turn, fuelling the transformation of health research and industry, as well as other aspects of social life, such as the adoption of IoB in work settings, or the provision of new options for entertainment – all with remarkable data-driven innovations and social benefits.”

- World Economic Forum, 2020, The Internet of Bodies

De facto* world government connects humanity to the Internet

A world government already exists, but its structure, membership and modus operandi are not known. It would appear to have assigned to the World Economic Forum responsibility for promoting a framework to connect humanity to the Internet. As we have already noted, the WEF is calling this emerging cyber network “the Internet of Bodies.”

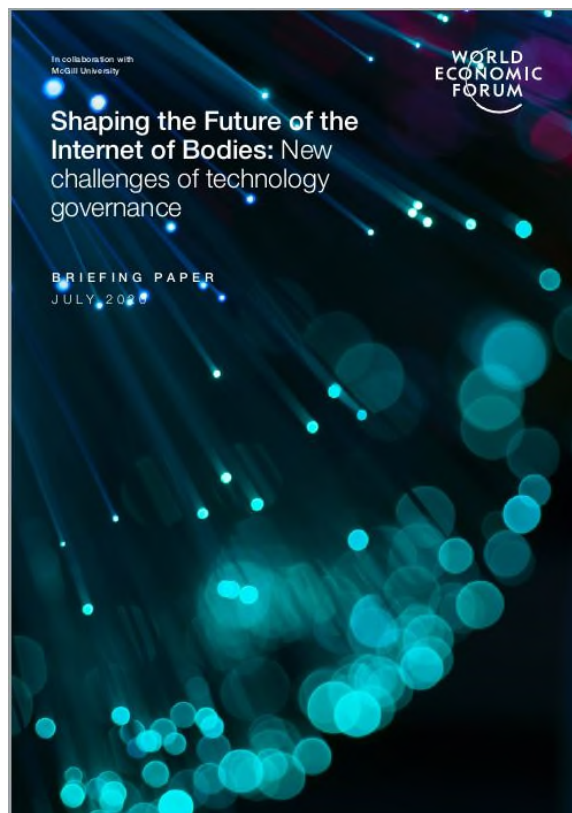

In its report on IOB (Internet of Bodies), published in 2020, the WEF actually admits [on p.5] that “extensive IOB technologies” are already being used to track the Coronavirus:

With an unprecedented number of sensors attached to, implanted within or ingested into human bodies to monitor, analyse and even modify human bodies and behaviour, immediate actions are needed to address the ethical and legal considerations that come with the IoB. The urgency of such actions is further brought to the forefront by the global COVID-19 pandemic, with extensive IoB technologies and data being enlisted for the surveillance and tracking of coronavirus.

Screenshot from the WEF IOB report

They even state how this is being done, namely through the implantation into “human bodies” of an “unprecedented number of sensors.” They admit also that this technology will be used to “modify human bodies and behaviour.”

Given this admission, it is hardly necessary for us to assert that Bluetooth biosensors are being implanted in recipients of the so-called Covid vaccine since the WEF is openly boasting that this is precisely what they are doing!

CONCLUSION

Generally speaking, society has little or no interest in the many ways advanced technology is being used to control human behavior. Very few are concerned that it may also be used for more nefarious purposes, such as population reduction.

The Covid vaccine program is being used to connect humanity to the Internet of Bodies. This is a deliberately demeaning term, not unlike the kind used in Zoology. Individual humans are being coded and classified like objects in an inventory.

For the Ruling Elite, humans are cattle which need to be branded, corralled, and managed according to scientific principles. Those which are deemed surplus to requirements will be eliminated, while those who are left – around a billion or so – will be “re-skilled” to serve as sterile minions in a centrally controlled ‘utopia’. The utopian aspects of the coming New World Order will apply only to the Ruling Elite.

The IOB will continuously monitor the behavior of these sterile minions and identify, from a variety of biometric indicators, their level of submissiveness and whether any are showing signs of disaffection or non-cooperation.

As the WEF says, they are turning the human body into a “technology platform.” The Internet of Bodies will in due course become a prison without walls.

The Enemy is trying to enslave mankind

This is the world that Satan wants, where absolute obedience can be demanded, and where trivial infringements can be punished almost as soon as they occur. Through his awesome system of surveillance he will be able to “see” and “judge” everyone on earth at the same time, thus imitating through the use of technology the omniscience and omnipresence of God.

There will be no place in any of this for Christianity!

The god of the New World Order is the god of power and control, the god who loathes the love and mercy of the One True God. Satan has no understanding of love, and neither have his followers. Thus the murder of millions, by whatever means, is purely a statistical exercise in their eyes. Their only concern is the possibility that the people may awaken en masse to what they are doing and hunt them down. This is why their worldwide surveillance system is so important to them, allowing dissidents to be identified and removed before they can garner widespread support.

They already enjoy a remarkable degree of surveillance via the Internet, where all activity can be analyzed in real time by sophisticated artificial intelligence software. The implanted biosensors will make it much easier to find and apprehend potential troublemakers during and after the coming financial collapse.

The “disappeared”

Europe and N America, along with Australia and New Zealand, will have their own “los desaparecidos.” This was the term widely used in Latin America for the tens of thousands of innocent people who were abducted and murdered by various juntas and militaristic regimes over the past 50 years. The “disappeared” were seen as possible sources of political opposition, people who expressed concern at the way their countries were being run. Bear in mind, the governments who authorized these killings were approved by Washington. What is more, they were often educated in European or American schools and colleges and would readily pass as “normal” people. The numbers killed – during peacetime in a so-called democracy – were horrifying. The estimates were, for Guatemala, 45,000, Columbia 83,000, Peru 20,000, Mexico 40,000, Brazil 80,000, Argentina 30,000, Chile 3,000, and so on. These figures are believed to be fairly conservative. Much of this killing was overseen by the CIA through Operation Condor, a program of terror designed to subjugate the entire continent.

The ultra-rich families in the US who approved all of this are the same ones who today are running the World Health Organization, the World Economic Forum, the CDC, the FDA, and the various institutions and industries behind the Covid-based ‘subjugation’ of the United States. For these people, the end justifies the means. If the US has to have its “los desaparecidos” – possibly numbering in the millions – they will not hesitate to set the machinery in motion.

When seen in this light, the term Internet of Bodies takes on a very sinister meaning.

These are due to be released on the market within days. Since "digital pills" containing nanosize biosensors have been approved by the FDA [see insert on p.5] we ought to assume that these new pills will have them, even if the fact is not disclosed on the package.

Christians ought to be able to see what's happening. It is one thing to forget the lessons of history, but quite another to ignore what God's Word plainly reveals. More than a quarter of the Bible is devoted to describing the End Time and yet few of those who profess to be Christian even bother to contrast current events with the signs that Jesus asked us to watch for. The Bible also described for our benefit the dark heart of the wicked and what we can expect from them when they gain complete control of the earth. Somehow the vast majority of Christians have convinced themselves that the wicked are not really all that bad, that Biblical descriptions of their true nature were exaggerated for poetic effect. How well the Enemy has deceived them!

The reality is that the Children of Wickedness want to own everything, including the bodies of those they intend to enslave:

"In the dark they dig through houses, which they had marked for themselves in the daytime: they know not the light." (Job 24:16)

"And they covet fields, and take them by violence; and houses, and take them away: so they oppress a man and his house, even a man and his heritage." (Micah 2:2)

When Christ returns, he will destroy the wicked Cabal and their servants, and he will do so with a fury that will shock the nations:

“...I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment.” (Isaiah 63:3)

“And I will execute vengeance in anger and fury upon the heathen, such as they have not heard.” (Micah 5:15)

The Wicked would appear to have scheduled 2022 as the year of their “great reset”. We would urge all true Christians to prepare themselves spiritually for these coming events and to stand on the Rock, come what may. Many non-believers will cry out for the guidance and consolation that only those who are truly born again in Christ will be able to provide.
