

The Coming Coup in the U.S. and the Dark Cabal who Planned It

by Jeremy James

The pace of change at this time is exceptional. The Enemy is pressing ahead vigorously on several fronts, seemingly confident that the masses of humanity will be too cowed by all that is happening to muster a serious response. With six thousand years of experience to draw on, we can be sure he has assessed his options correctly.

Locked in a war that he cannot afford to lose, he is always more likely to use too much force than too little. A million deaths here or there mean nothing to him. The crucial consideration, from his perspective, is that the world as a whole remains ignorant of his existence and his goals. Even though they are extremely wealthy, his army of dedicated earthly servants is still relatively small and must continue to operate under a cloak of deception until the stage is set for the Man of Sin.

Theoretically, if a significant number of sleeping souls suddenly awoke and saw what was happening behind the scenes, there could be a violent backlash, a popular rebellion directed against his servants. Numerically, they would be overwhelmed and their plans would have to be put on hold for several generations until the 'herd' had been lulled once again into a deep, agreeable sleep.

We say “theoretically” because, despite all the alarms that have been sounded over the past hundred years or so by scholars and analysts, both Christian and secular, there is not the slightest sign that a collective awakening will occur any time soon.

The LORD, in His mercy, has allowed a huge quantity of revealing information to be made available via the Internet over the past twenty years or so, material which, had it been examined in a calm and objective way, would have roused an elephant from deep sedation. But very few made the effort and fewer still evaluated what they found against the Word of God.

The concentration of power

Over the past fifty years or so advances in technology have concentrated an extraordinary amount of power in the hands of a small number of people. The laws of the land provide the only restraint on the way this power is exercised. If there are gaps in the law or if the laws are designed to be ineffective, then the public has no protection against the misuse of these powers. Equally, where legislative limits are clearly established but not enforced, the public has no protection. Furthermore, even if the laws are sound and the law enforcement authorities are prepared to prosecute offenders, the law is still of no effect unless the courts weigh the evidence fairly, find the offenders guilty, and impose a meaningful penalty or sentence.

The laws of the land are only as effective as the institutions that ensure they are being properly implemented. This includes the government, the police, and the courts. But there is another, poorly regulated, institution which has a vital role in this process, namely the media.

If the public is unable to monitor the way the laws of the land are being applied, then they have no way of knowing how effective they are. Only through regular, impartial reporting by the media can the public gather enough information about the state of the nation to judge the effectiveness of the various institutions that are supposed to nurture and protect it.

Once the press, and the media generally – for strategic reasons – begin to report on only part of what is happening or, worse still, to misreport and distort developments in certain areas, then real problems set in.

Merger of the media and state propaganda

When the press no longer serves the public interest, corruption ensues. After a few decades, it takes only a simple change to turn the press into a dedicated purveyor of propaganda. If the public fails to detect what has happened, then this media-enabled propaganda is exceptionally effective.

Propaganda in the Soviet Union was channeled on a daily basis via official state publications like Pravda and Izvestia. They did much to control the mind of the average Soviet citizen, but their impact was dampened by the fact that everyone knew they were state-owned and state-controlled. A similar system of mind control has been operating in the West for decades, but with one crucial difference – the average citizen does not know that their leading newspapers are controlled in exactly the same way as Pravda and Izvestia.

While the propaganda is more subtle, its impact is far greater because the average person simply cannot see that his opinions and perceptions are being shaped and moulded by a carefully crafted editorial policy. The so-called neutral brokers – the press and the media – are, in reality, the paid servants of a rich and powerful elite.

Once the press is weaponized in this way, and aimed with malicious intent at an unsuspecting public, it can change the very criteria that we humanly use to distinguish between right and wrong, between just and unjust. It can even lead to tyranny.

Four Examples of Media Propaganda in Ireland

Here are just four examples of the way this has worked in Ireland since 2002:

(1) Government-enabled theft

The government collaborated with an international banking cartel to enable the theft of €150bn or thereabouts from the Irish people. The cartel had loaned huge sums of money to Irish borrowers to buy property at vastly inflated prices. When the bubble burst and the property market collapsed, the Irish were told that they, not the banks, were responsible.

The government, in an act of sheer malice, sided with the banking cartel and betrayed the country. They had even turned off the banking ‘alarm system’ a few years earlier – the legislative controls which would have prevented this theft. The press, in turn, sided with the government and spun an avalanche of lies, misrepresenting and distorting all that had happened in such a grotesque way that the public was persuaded to accept, at first some, and then all of the blame.

Even after a detailed Parliamentary Enquiry in 2015 into the cause of the crisis, an exercise tainted from start to finish by lies, shadow-boxing and evasion, the persons responsible – many of whom were readily identifiable – got off scot-free. Both the lead-up to the crisis and the white-wash that came afterwards were only possible because the media was entirely controlled by the ruling elite. The shutting down of the robust framework that regulated the banking system and its replacement by a farcical counterfeit was also achieved only through the craven complicity of the media.

(2) The normalization of sodomy

The media also conducted a shameless campaign over several years to convince the people of Ireland that the homosexual lifestyle was normal and natural. The countless problems with that so-called lifestyle – medical, psychological, behavioral – were simply ignored.

The government then pushed for a referendum on ‘same sex’ marriage. This would entail an amendment to the Constitution, which the majority of the Irish electorate would have to approve. The media unleashed such a carnival of lies – while at the same time censoring all informed comment in the public arena – that a gormless electorate did what they were told. Incredibly they voted by a margin of 2 to 1 to put Christian marriage on the same legal and moral plane as a contract between two homosexuals.

(3) A nation votes to kill its own children

Three years later a similar campaign of lies and duplicity in the media came to a head with a referendum to legalize abortion. The people of Ireland then did something that has no historical precedent. They voted, again by a margin of 2 to 1, to approve the killing of unborn children for social convenience, including those close to birth.

When the citizens of Germany voted Hitler into power in 1933, they didn’t know that the Nazis would institute the T4 program, the systematic murder of physically disabled and mentally retarded adults and children by well-respected medical professionals. The very idea would have horrified them. And yet, 85 years later, the people of Ireland, a “civilized” country, voted overwhelmingly to legalize the arbitrary killing of healthy children-in-the-womb, all on the basis of such Marxist slogans as ‘My body, my choice.’

This hideous outcome was only made possible by the relentless repetition in the media, uncontested and unproven, of propositions which had no legal, moral or medical basis. No lie was too outrageous. The public was made to believe that, if they did not approve this barbaric amendment, they were nothing but slaves to the Catholic Church and its medieval mindset. The Irish were so determined to prove that they were not slaves to the Catholic Church – which, ironically, betrayed them all – that they proved that they were slaves instead to the New World Order.

(4) The election of Marxist thugs

If these examples were not enough to show the astonishing extent to which the Irish are brainwashed and manipulated by the media, the result of the recent general election should settle the matter.

The IRA has operated for years under the cynical pretence that its so-called political wing, known as Sinn Féin, is controlled by an entirely separate command structure. This has enabled an organization with a long record of terrorist atrocities to compete for seats in Parliament, give peace-loving interviews in the media, and maintain a façade of democratic respectability.

A few decades ago, everyone knew that Sinn Féin was run by a vicious gang of thugs and sadists, just like its older brother, the IRA. However, through its careful rehabilitation by the media and a shameful failure by journalists of every persuasion to focus clearly on its methods and its goals, this Marxist-Leninist fraternity has succeeded in rebranding itself. It even began to win seats in the Irish parliament. By 2011 it had secured 14 seats in the Dáil. This increased to 23 in 2016. And by 2020 – following the recent general election – its total has increased by 60%. It now has 37 seats (out of 160), matched only by Fianna Fáil. There is a serious risk that this gang of Marxist-Leninist thugs will share power in the next government (which is currently in formation).

About a quarter of the Irish electorate voted for Sinn Féin in February 2020, a party controlled by a military wing whose record for violence, torture, kidnapping, mutilation and murder is not disputed, even by its own members! Its reputation for brutality and terrorism is well known across the world, and some of its top operatives have trained FARC guerrillas in Colombia and Islamic terrorists in North Africa. And yet, through careful grooming in the media, which included many flattering portrayals of its activities in recent years, one quarter of the Irish public was tricked into believing that this rapacious leopard had lost its spots. As a result one of the most dangerous political parties in Europe is on the brink of securing a Ministerial presence in the Irish government.

The real face of Sinn Féin.

These examples give a stark illustration of the power exercised by the media over the population of Ireland. This power covers, not just the ability to twist and pervert rational thought, to stymie debate and fact-based discussion, but also to corrupt or dismantle the moral standards which underpin our society. The Irish Times, The Irish Independent, and RTE (the national broadcaster) are among the most shameless purveyors of Marxist propaganda in Europe, and yet the Irish public hasn't a clue!

Media propaganda worldwide

This is not unique to Ireland. Every country in the world is controlled in the same way, to a greater or lesser extent. Ireland may well be an extreme example, but the same methods and techniques that have been employed here are being used elsewhere to great effect. The approaching coup in the U.S. will seem to most Americans to have come from nowhere, but this is due almost entirely to the control exercised by the media in that country. The countless warning signs have been suppressed, disguised, and redefined, or in other ways rendered transparent so that they rarely show up on the public radar for what they really are. Take globalization, for example. The media says it is good, but in reality it is nothing less than the transfer of American industry and wealth to Marxist China. Or take another example. According to the media, the threat posed by Communism effectively disappeared thirty years ago with the fall of the Berlin Wall and the break-up of the Soviet Union. But this fantastic notion ignores the plain fact that all of the countries that were once ruled by 'Communism' are now ruled by the same cliques and insiders who controlled 'Communism'. These people are just as determined today to collapse and take over the U.S. as they were when they ruled under a different label. Their task is made much easier by the failure of the American public to recognize the fact, a failure that is due primarily, if not exclusively, to the complacency engendered by the media.

Before we discuss the coming coup and the way it will likely be carried out, we should pause for a moment to reflect on Senator Jenner's machine gun.

Senator Jenner's Machine Gun

Senator William Jenner was a true patriotic American. He understood how the institutions of government were being taken over from within and tried to warn the American people of the danger they were facing. Here are some extracts from a milestone speech he gave before Congress on February 23, 1954, while he was a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee:

“Today the path to total dictatorship in the United States can be laid by strictly legal means, unseen and unheard by the Congress, the President, or the people ... Outwardly we have a Constitutional government. We have operating within our government and political system, another body representing another form of government, a bureaucratic elite which believes our Constitution is outmoded and is sure that it is the winning side ...

“All the strange developments in foreign policy agreements may be traced to this group who are going to make us over to suit their pleasure. We must consider our danger not only in the terms of the treaties or agreements which have been completed, but in terms of those still in the pipelines, or already in effect, but still invisible to Congress or to the people ...

“This political action group has its own local political support organizations, its own pressure groups, its own vested interests, its foothold within our government, and its own propaganda apparatus ...

“Someone, somewhere, conceived the brilliant strategy of revolution by the assembly line. The pattern for total revolution was divided into separate parts, each of them as innocent, safe, and familiar-looking as possible. The men who made the blueprints know exactly what the final product is to be. They have planned the final assembly years ahead.”

Senator William Jenner (Indiana)

One may call this group by many names. Some people call it socialism, some communism, some collectivism. I prefer to call it "democratic centralism." That is the type of government in which executive officials have absolute power under the outer forms of so-called democracy.

But I wish to stress one fact. The important point to remember about this group is not its ideology but its organization. It is a dynamic, aggressive, elite corps, forcing its way through every opening, to make a breach for a collectivist one-party state.

It operates secretly, silently, continuously to transform our Government without our suspecting the change is under way.

Senator Jenner defines the secret cabal behind the ongoing transformation of the government of the United States. [Screen shot from the Congressional Record, February 23, 1954.]

He was trying to expose the decisive role played by the Council for Foreign Relations in deciding domestic and foreign policy. He was also trying to show – more than 6 decades ago! – that the agents of Communism within the American political elite were leading the U.S. toward an international totalitarian form of government. By strictly legal means, in full view of the American people, changes were being made which, according to Senator Jenner, would result ultimately in “total dictatorship in the United States.”

Along with certain other members of Congress, few in number, he knew how they operated and how much control they had already achieved. In the final paragraph quoted above, he referred to the “brilliant strategy” they were following, where the revolutionary plan was divided into much smaller parts. Examined individually, the various parts seemed harmless enough. It was only when they were all put together than their real purpose became apparent. This, the “final assembly”, would not take place for many years, according to Senator Jenner (Remember, he was speaking in 1954).

To illustrate this strategy, Senator Jenner used the following analogy:

I want to invite the attention of the Senate, Mr. President, to the subtlety and finesse of this hidden revolution.

To make it clear I will relate a story.

Under the Nazi regime in Germany, a man worked in a factory making baby carriages.

His wife was going to have a baby, but the Nazi government would not let anybody buy baby carriages.

So he decided he would secretly collect the parts he needed, one from each department, and assemble the carriage himself.

When the time came, he and his wife gathered up the pieces, and assembled them.

But when they finished, they did not have a baby carriage. They had a machinegun.

The story explains what has been happening to our form of Government.

Someone, somewhere, conceived the brilliant strategy of revolution by assembly line.

[Screen shot from the Congressional Record, February 23, 1954.]

He specifically implicated the United Nations in this sophisticated assembly line, where its law and its provisions would be used, at the appropriate time, to overrule elements of the U.S. Constitution, and even Congress itself, to enable the “final assembly.” Only then – and not a moment sooner – would the American people see that the promised baby carriage was actually a machine gun. And the machine gun was aimed at them.

With remarkable prescience, he stated that the time bomb would not be set off until the American public had been so heavily conditioned by state-planned propaganda that they were convinced that resistance would be futile:

Let us not be deceived by a minor point. It is not part of the plan that any of these hidden powers would be prematurely used. Oh, no.

There is no intention to make visible the final result, until the masses have been conditioned, like Pavlov's dogs, to what they should feel and say.

This assembly line revolution is like a time bomb, Mr. President.

The mechanism is under complete control.

It is ready to go off, but it is not going to be set off until the time is ripe, until a switch is pulled.

The switch is not to be pulled until the American people are conditioned, or convinced that resistance is hopeless.

[Screen shot from the Congressional Record, February 23, 1954.]

His impressive grasp of the strategy that the enemy was following is shown by the following extract from his speech:

When it explodes, perhaps years from now, will we find that perhaps an unscrupulous American President could build armed power, through the American draft laws, and then use that armed might, under a United Nations assignment, as he saw fit, while the Constitution and the courts were powerless to restrain him?

[Screen shot from the Congressional Record, February 23, 1954.]

He had in mind the way the U.S. military had already been deployed illegally by the President of the United States during the Korean War. By allowing the U.S. military to be co-opted into the so-called U.N. Armed Forces during the conflict in Korea, both Truman and Eisenhower had subtly set aside their legal authority as Commander-in-Chief in time of war.

Senator Jenner could see that a future American President might pass control of the U.S. military to the U.N. in a crisis or national emergency, and neither Congress nor the Supreme Court could do anything about it. Perhaps he even envisaged that such an “unscrupulous” President would do so in circumstances that would enable to U.N. to command the U.S. military on American soil, against segments of the American population. The Act known as Posse Comitatus ruled out this possibility in Jenner’s day, but this absolute restriction was removed by Obama – another Marxist – when he signed the National Defense Authorization Act into law in 2012.

Senator Jenner was painfully aware of the fact that most of his listeners, not just those in Congress, but across the nation as a whole, would find it very difficult to believe that such a dark cabal could exist in their midst:

If I seem to be extremist, the reason is that this revolutionary clique cannot be understood, unless we accept the fact that they are extremist.
It is difficult for people governed by reasonableness and morality to imagine the existence of a movement which ignores reasonableness and boasts of its determination to destroy, which ignores morality, and boasts of its cleverness in outwitting its opponents by abandoning all scruples.
This ruthless power-seeking elite is a disease of our century, Mr. President.

[Screen shot from the Congressional Record, February 23, 1954.]

He calls them “this ruthless power-seeking elite”, a conspiracy within Communism to bring down the United States. Though he does not say it explicitly, he is implying that some of the wealthiest and most influential people in America were wrapped up in this conspiracy.

He could have quoted from chapter 7 of the Book of Daniel, which spells out the incredible ruthlessness of those who control the Fourth Kingdom, the regime that now rules the entire earth:

“After this I saw in the night visions, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth: it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it: and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it; and it had ten horns.” (Daniel 7:7)

“Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast, which was diverse from all the others, exceeding dreadful, whose teeth were of iron, and his nails of brass; which devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet;” (Daniel 7:19)

“Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces.” (Daniel 7:23)

We need to recognize that the wickedness that will fill the Lake of Fire is already well entrenched in the world today. It is not hiding in a corner somewhere but standing in plain view. Christians who are still struggling with this should reflect on the words of Daniel.

After being shown their psychopathic brutality and the dreadful things that they would eventually do in the End Time, the “greatly beloved” prophet was sick for several days.

In like manner believers today, when they stumble upon this awful reality, often fall sick for a time – such is the shock.

Senator Jenner also tried to show why this campaign of deception was so difficult to counter, even when one knew of its existence, the methods it was using and what its proponents wanted to achieve:

Does anybody seriously think that 96 Members of the Senate, with the responsibilities they carry for every field of legislation, can cope with a State Department with a staff of 10,000 people, some of whom are directed by officials committed to secret political revolution?

[Screen shot from the Congressional Record, February 23, 1954.]

Many who have studied the question have confirmed to their satisfaction that the State Department is indeed dedicated to the creation of the proposed New World Order and that it is led by men and women who, as Senator Jenner states, are “committed to secret political revolution.” He saw this in 1954 and warned the American public from the floor of the Senate, but very few ears picked up the message. Such is the power of the media in the U.S.

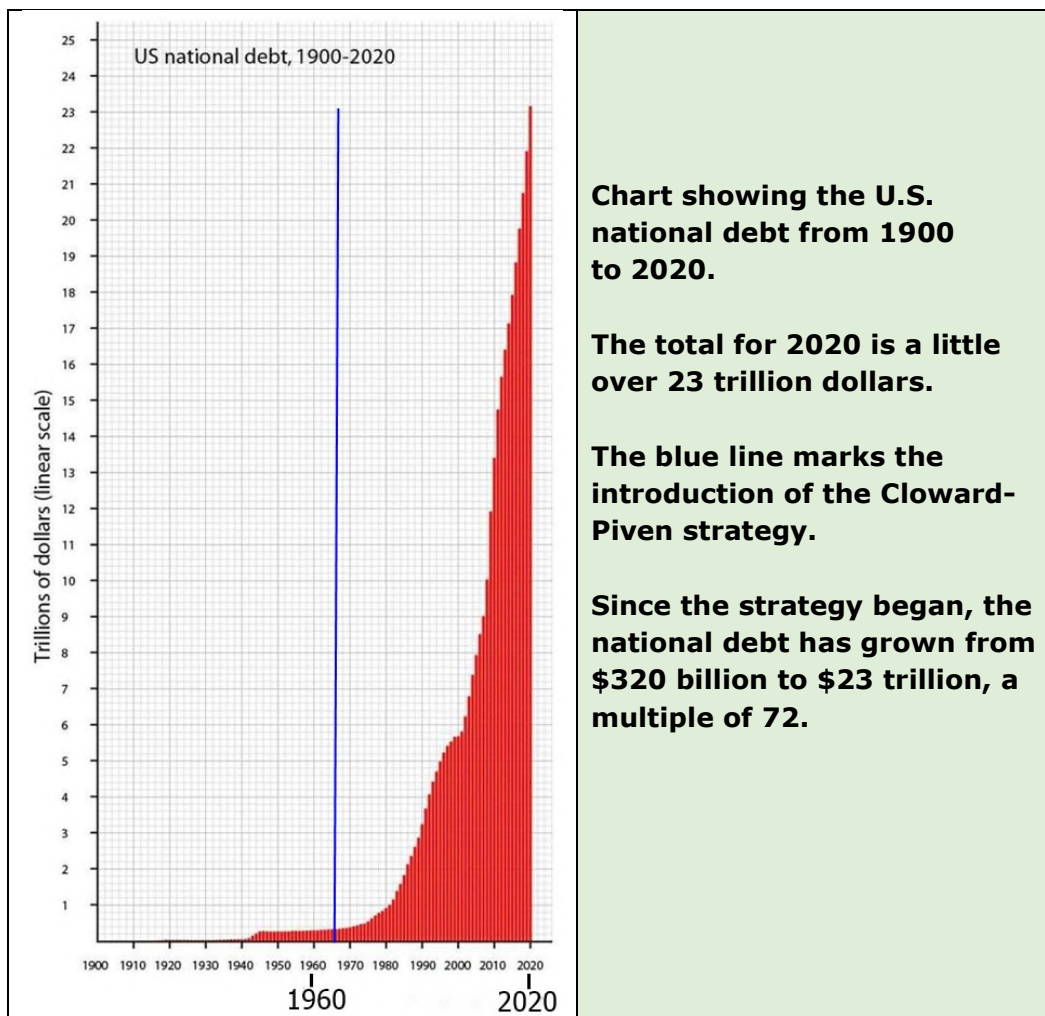

Frances Piven and Richard Cloward receive public recognition by the Elite in 1993.

Others have sounded similar warnings

Others have sounded similar warnings, but these too have been suppressed by the media. The individuals concerned often met with untimely deaths – the number of US Senators who have died in plane crashes is over ten times greater than the national average. Others have had “accidents” or committed “suicide.”

Of course, the traitors are not only in the State Department, but are distributed as required across the machinery of government. For example, the U.S. Treasury has been following the Cloward-Piven strategy for over fifty years. This is a Communist operational tactic which aims to drive a nation further and further into debt until the burden becomes unsustainable. The cost of simply servicing the debt becomes so great that the rest of the world, sensing the risk of default, refuses to invest further in the great Ponzi Scheme.

Two radical Communists, Richard Cloward and Frances Piven [see photo above], first proposed their strategy in 1966. One can see from the chart below that the U.S. Treasury has been following it ever since, with alarming results:

Jenner’s “unscrupulous American President”

The stage is now set for the emergence of what Senator Jenner called an “unscrupulous American President.” This would appear to be the key to the whole operation.

The level of debt in the U.S. – federal, state, municipal, corporate, and household – has grown so large that a conventional economic shock could send the entire edifice tumbling into the abyss. Senator Jenner realized that this collapse would be triggered only when the Elite were ready to impose their new form of government. The American public would first have to be conditioned to believe that the “old” system was outdated and not sufficiently robust to handle the challenges of the 21st century. They have been working for decades to engineer a situation where the majority of Americans would actually vote in favor of the new regime. But to do this they would have to feel there was no alternative.

In the remainder of this paper we will show why most Americans will feel so helpless that they will go along with what the Elite have planned.

The Brutus Option

As we have stated in several of our previous papers, the Elite appear to want to bring about a Constitutional crisis involving the office of the President of the United States. We might call this “the Brutus option”, after the protagonist in the paper appended to our #141 – ‘The Origins of the American Military Coup of 2012’ by Charles J Dunlap Jr. This paper by Major General Dunlap of the USAF is essential reading for anyone who wants to see how carefully this option has been examined by senior military personnel in the US.

Illustration on the cover of La Domenica del Corriere, an Italian weekly magazine supplement, July 1950, showing U.S. troops serving under the U.N. flag in the Korean War.

General Brutus took the office of President when it suddenly fell vacant and the Vice President refused to take the oath of office. The military argued that this was a temporary but necessary expedient to maintain political stability. Brutus even got the American people to ratify his elevation in a national referendum, promising to vacate the office as soon as ‘order’ was restored. (See our papers #141, #173 and #214 for a more detailed examination of the Dunlap paper and the insights that it provides into recent events.)

Time bomb

America is now precariously close to the crisis situation that Dunlap envisaged in 1992 and Senator Jenner saw as far back as 1954. The Elite would appear to have taken the following steps to prime the “time bomb” that Senator Jenner predicted:

1. Tie America into a series of complex treaties which limit its sovereignty. This has already been done.
2. Make many aspects of US law, including the Constitution, subservient to the UN Charter. This has already been done.
3. Prepare for a state of ‘national emergency’ where the President will be authorized in law to exercise exceptional powers without the approval of Congress or judicial oversight. This has already been accomplished through a long series of Executive Orders which, in a national emergency, will automatically take effect whenever the President – on his sole authority – declares martial law.
4. Just as Senator Jenner envisaged, the President will be able to pass control of the U.S. military, or parts thereof, to a UN commander. Foreign generals would then be able to direct US troops on US soil for the alleged purpose of “restoring order”.
5. The emergency situation would appear to have 3 triggers:
 - (a) A deadly disease which threatens a pandemic. This is already under way.
 - (b) The chaos created by the pandemic will lead to a major crisis in the banking system and a huge fall in the stock market which together threaten to destroy household savings and accrued pension benefits.
 - (c) The US Presidential election of 2020 will be rendered void by “foreign interference”. The military, with strong support from the judiciary, will urge the President to remain in office. With typical modesty, President Trump initially refuses to do so, but relents when the media presents the public with the terrifying prospect of a national calamity if he leaves office, as required under the Constitution, on January 20th, 2021. This is a variation of the Brutus Option, where the incumbent President is pressed to remain in office for a second term, even though he has not been lawfully reelected.

6. In order to give a semblance of legality to what is happening, the proxy ‘President’ holds a national referendum in which the people are asked to vote ‘Yes’ or ‘No’ to his continuance in office until order is restored. This is the road followed by Brutus in Dunlap’s essay. The referendum was carried in Dunlap’s essay, primarily (he states) because so many middle-class Americans feared the loss of their pensions if they didn’t comply.

Significantly, the most improbable part of this hypothetical scenario, the deadly pandemic, is already under way.

Furthermore, elaborate preparations for another key part of this scenario – the aborted Presidential election – have already been made.

The 2020 Presidential Election

Allegations of Russian interference in the 2016 Presidential election have been thrashed out ad nauseum in the media, aided by televised Congressional hearings and a high-level criminal investigation (the Mueller Report). These will have embedded in the minds of most Americans the notion that the Russians are planning to meddle in the 2020 elections. If the Democratic candidate is a known socialist (Sanders), or someone with known links to the Ukraine (Biden), then the possibility of Russian interference could become a matter of real concern.

On top of this we have had the fiasco at the Democratic Iowa caucus in January where a computer glitch threatened to invalidate the ballot (The result might still be open to legal challenge). Given that the Presidential Election relies heavily on the use of electronic Diebold machines to register and tally votes, a glitch in states like New York, Illinois, California or Florida, which could decide the election one way or another, would be a disaster.

An expert in computing has already appeared before Congress testifying to the fact that these machines are unreliable and vulnerable to hackers. The US Senate Select Committee on Intelligence looked into the possibility of Russian interference in the 2016 elections. On 21 June 2017 they heard testimony from Professor Halderman of the University of Michigan. Halderman stated:

“I know firsthand how easy it can be to manipulate computerized voting machines. As part of security testing, I've performed attacks on widely used voting machines, and I've had students successfully attack machines under my supervision... What we found was disturbing: we could reprogram the machine to invisibly cause any candidate to win... Vulnerabilities like these are endemic throughout our election system. Cybersecurity experts have studied a wide range of U.S. voting machines – including both DREs and optical scanners – and in every single case, they've found severe vulnerabilities that would allow attackers to sabotage machines and to alter votes. That's why there is overwhelming consensus in the cybersecurity and election integrity research communities that our elections are at risk... An attacker can probe different areas of the most important “swing states” for vulnerabilities, find the areas that have the weakest protection, and strike there... This month, we've seen reports detailing Russian efforts to target voter registration systems in up to 39 states and to develop a capability to spread an attack from an election technology vendor to local election offices... If voters cannot trust that their votes are counted honestly, they will have reason to doubt the validity of elections... there is no doubt that Russia has the technical ability to commit widescale attacks against our voting system, as do other hostile nations.”

It may not be necessary to sabotage the 2020 election, but simply to cause so much confusion that no-one has any confidence in the result. That might possibly be the most contentious outcome, where one side is convinced that the other side “rigged” the election. Congress may ask the Supreme Court to rule in the matter, only to find that the issues were too complex to unravel in a court of law. If this uncertainty and acrimony are allowed to drag on for several months, it would be immensely damaging to public confidence in the democratic process in America. Many would welcome a military intervention just to maintain order and restore confidence. For the Elite this is the ideal outcome, where the people themselves demand that the military step in. Let them suggest the Brutus Option.

Some commentators have suggested that the election could be deferred by the so-called coronavirus. However we believe this would not suit the Elite. Too much blame would be directed at the existing administration and the President himself. The blame must fall elsewhere. Besides, they want the American people to participate actively in the destruction of their own Constitution.

The long-planned Transfer of Wealth

Marxists has long claimed that they want to effect a worldwide redistribution of wealth. The irony, of course, is that the “redistribution” that Marxism will actually deliver is the opposite of what its naïve adherents had imagined. We are about to witness the greatest transfer of wealth in history, where the accrued equities and savings of most of humanity will disappear down the black hole of collapsing markets, bank failures and currency defaults. Those whose wealth is untouched by this collapse will then step in and buy the real underlying assets at a fraction of their true value. The one percent who own half of the world’s wealth will end up owning the other half as well.

The Elite like to test out their plans on a small scale before employing them more widely. The coming transfer of wealth, which will affect every nation on earth, has already been successfully tested in Russia.

After the “fall” of the USSR in 1991, the rouble came under pressure. Its value fluctuated on foreign currency markets. Somehow the Russian leadership – with the assistance of the national media (of course) – convinced the Russian people that the currency had actually collapsed and that the rouble was now worthless, even in Russia.

Incredibly, despite their long experience of state-sponsored lies and propaganda, they failed to see that their currency could not possibly lose its value within Russia itself. It was only necessary for the national banking system to honor the currency and it could continue in circulation. Savings would remain intact. But the banks, on orders from the Kremlin, simply withdrew the currency and destroyed the most important store of wealth. Many were made destitute. Starvation was rife in towns and cities across Russia. Some were hit so hard that they turned to alcohol and drank themselves to death. Life expectancy fell by several years. Millions were forced to survive through barter and exchange, and by growing vegetables on small allotments.

“Woe to them that devise iniquity, and work evil upon their beds! when the morning is light, they practise it, because it is in the power of their hand. And they covet fields, and take them by violence; and houses, and take them away: so they oppress a man and his house, even a man and his heritage.” (Micah 2:1-2)

Enter the Oligarchs

The Russian elite then took the opportunity to privatise the natural resources of Russia – oil, gas, timber, and minerals. Every Russian citizen was entitled to a few shares in this massive exercise. Alas, most were too poor to hold onto them. In this way a small group of men, the famous ‘Oligarchs’, bought up most of the shares and became immensely rich in the process.

How can a country with vast natural resources and no national debt go broke? How can its currency collapse? It is impossible. But if the national media peddles a deadly lie and, at the urging of their leaders, the people believe it, then a phony ‘collapse’ can be engineered.

Something similar is coming to the rest of the world. The wealth of nations, including their infrastructure and natural resources, will be confiscated by the banking system to “pay off” aggregate national debt and pour fresh liquidity into the markets. Since mortgages on a huge swathe of private property will be in default, the banks will end up owning most of the residential housing, as well as the plant, equipment, inventory, and premises of many small and medium-size businesses.

National currencies will be abolished or phased out. The replacement currency, when it comes, will be electronic. Individual nations will be allowed to participate in the new international banking system only if they adopt the One World currency. This will enable total electronic surveillance across society, where every purchase, however small, will be centrally recorded and behavior inconsistent with government guidelines identified.

The Elite will likely take the opportunity at this time to implement the Chinese social credit system on a worldwide basis.

The real story behind the plague known as AIDS

Given the importance of the Wuhan plague to the plan being followed by the Elite, it is worth noting that it too was tested in advance. We have all heard of SARS, MERS and Ebola, each of which qualifies in a small way as a test run. But the real test run was the plague known as AIDS which, according to official statistics, claimed the lives of over 700,000 people in the U.S. alone.

Since the history of AIDS/HIV is rather convoluted and requires some time to explain, we will address it, God willing, in a future paper. However, we will state here that many respected scientists regard HIV as bogus, an unproven hypothesis invented by the pharmaceutical industry to serve as the sole cause of the disease known as AIDS. And AIDS itself is a constellation of illnesses that result from a compromised immune system, not a virus. The death rate from this spurious disease was so high because very large numbers of homosexuals with weakened immune systems were persuaded to go on a course of treatment using powerful drugs which further weakened their natural defenses. In short, the pharmaceutical industry made vast sums of money promoting a phony disease with a phony cure. Along the way they killed several hundred thousand innocent men. The industry later reduced the dosage levels so that the death rate would suddenly fall and the public would believe the “cure” was effective.

This ghastly experiment in mass deception succeeded in convincing the world (a) that stable and persistent viruses exist which can spread rapidly through the human population and kill millions and (b) that the pharmaceutical industry can be relied upon to produce an effective antidote. Sound familiar?

Many of the institutions involved in these wicked operations are led by members of a small group of inter-connected families. For example, the CDC, which worked hard in the 1980s to convince the public that HIV was the cause of AIDS, is now claiming that Covid-19 is certain to cause a deadly pandemic. A top official in the CDC today, Dr Nancy Messonnier, head of the National Center for Immunization and Respiratory Diseases, is promoting this line. She happens to be the sister of the former Deputy Attorney General, Rod Rosenstein, who oversaw the Mueller probe.

CONCLUSION

Senator Jenner understood that the average person has great difficulty believing that an organized cabal of this nature could exist. As he said, “It is difficult for people governed by reasonableness and morality to imagine the existence of a movement which ignores reasonableness and boasts of its determination to destroy, which ignores morality, and boasts of its cleverness in outwitting its opponents by abandoning all scruples. This ruthless power-seeking elite is a disease...”

The Word of God told us long ago that such people exist and that they will work together to deadly effect in the End Time. Jesus warned us that they were just like their father, who was a liar and a murderer from the start (John 8:44). Death and deception are their stock in trade.

This ruthless power-seeking elite, as Senator Jenner called them, will not stop until they have overthrown the United States and set up a One World Government.

John Stuart Mill

We will close with the words of John Stuart Mill, an English insider and political commentator who fully understood what had to be done to bring about a dictatorship by stealth:

“Thus, a people may prefer a free government, but if, from indolence, or carelessness, or cowardice, or want of public spirit, they are unequal to the exertions necessary for preserving it; if they will not fight for it when it is directly attacked; if they can be deluded by the artifices used to cheat them out of it; if by momentary discouragement, or temporary panic, or a fit of enthusiasm for an individual, they can be induced to lay their liberties at the feet even of a great man, or trust him with powers which enable him to subvert their institutions; in all these cases they are more or less unfit for liberty: and though it may be for their good to have had it even for a short time, they are unlikely long to enjoy it.” – John Stuart Mill, Considerations on Representative Government, 1861

As the Elite see it, they are perfectly justified in pursuing this aim. If the people – “the herd” – do not have enough sense to guard against it, then they deserve what they get.

Alas, we are on the brink of the situation that he predicted in 1861.

The principle itself has been applied many times since then – in Russia, China, Germany, Spain, and several other countries – but now the choicest fruit of all is on a low-hanging branch, awaiting its fate. As Mill envisaged, the people will be induced to lay their liberties at the feet of a ‘great man’ and to entrust him with powers that will enable him to subvert their institutions.

his trust in the LORD shall be safe.”
